A bridge does two things at once. It joins what stands apart, and it carries weight. DISHA 2027 is built to do both.

DISHA 2027 reframes the conversation around sustainability, creativity and civilisational knowledge by bringing three creative and intellectual faculties of Parul University, Design, Fine Arts and Liberal Arts, onto a single international stage. Over two days in Vadodara, the conference convenes researchers, designers, artists, scholars, technologists, entrepreneurs and policy thinkers to work out practical pathways towards futures that are sustainable, equitable and culturally rooted.

The conference holds two ideas together rather than choosing between them. In the spirit of Vasudhaiva Kutumbakam, the world as one family, it places India's long inheritance of knowledge alongside its restless contemporary energy in design, scholarship and technology. Ancient wisdom is not treated as heritage to be admired. It is treated as working material for the problems in front of us.

Contributions are invited across seven research tracks and six cross faculty thematic panels that span design, the visual arts, the humanities, Indian Knowledge Systems, artificial intelligence, creative pedagogy and the study of peace and human futures. Two parallel calls, one academic and one for practice, ensure that the room holds both the paper and the prototype.

Why this conference, and why now

India's approach to its centenary in 2047 calls for integrated thinking: civilisational wisdom, creative practice, technological innovation and sustainable global leadership, argued together rather than in separate rooms. A multidisciplinary creative conference is unusually well placed to translate that ambition into culture, pedagogy and practice.

DISHA 2027 sets out to:

- Turn research and creative practice into implementable strategies for cities, communities, institutions and the creative economy.

- Surface scalable innovations across design, the arts, AI and digital culture that respect social equity and ecological limits.

- Connect academia, government, industry, foundations and community stakeholders through a two call engagement model.

- Strengthen Parul University's international standing through the Cumulus network and a standing Global Advisory Board.

Global alignment

The themes of DISHA 2027 map directly onto Viksit Bharat 2047, the G20 development agenda and the seventeen United Nations Sustainable Development Goals. The Cumulus Association extends the reach of the conference to a worldwide network of art, design and media institutions across more than seventy countries, and gives accepted work a route into global creative and academic discourse.

The hosts

Parul University

Parul University, Vadodara, is a NAAC A++ accredited private university in Gujarat, home to a large multidisciplinary campus that spans engineering, medicine, management, design, fine arts, liberal arts, law and the sciences. Its scale allows research questions to travel across faculties, which is precisely the condition DISHA 2027 is designed to exploit.

Parul Institute of Design

Parul Institute of Design teaches and practises across fashion design, fashion merchandising, interior design, product and industrial design, communication design, animation, VFX, film and television. A member institution of the Cumulus Association, PID works at the intersection of craft ecosystems, industry practice and design research, and convenes DISHA 2027.

Parul Institute of Fine Arts

Parul Institute of Fine Arts carries forward the studio traditions of painting, sculpture, printmaking and applied art, with sustained attention to material practice, visual culture and the place of the artist in public life.

Parul Institute of Liberal Arts

Parul Institute of Liberal Arts anchors the conference in critical inquiry. Across literature, philosophy, history, psychology, policy and cultural studies, it serves as the integrative knowledge partner, connecting every track through ethics, communication, language and civilisational thought.

Objectives

01 Examine pathways for sustainable and creative futures through design, the arts, the humanities and global collaboration.

02 Build genuine interdisciplinary exchange across the three faculties and with industry, government, foundations and communities.

03 Explore sustainable models in design, fashion, textiles, fine arts and creative technologies that balance creativity, culture and ecological responsibility.

04 Demonstrate AI and digital innovations that improve sustainability, inclusivity, cultural access and ethical governance.

05 Position Indian Knowledge Systems as a living resource for global sustainability, wellbeing and ethical living.

06 Advance creative education and research through interdisciplinary pedagogy, South to South partnerships and the Cumulus network.

07 Encourage publication of selected papers, case studies and design led innovations into global discourse.

Outcomes

- Seven tracks of peer reviewed research delivered across two days, with Scopus-indexed conference proceedings carrying an ISBN.
- Selected papers forwarded for consideration to a Scopus-indexed journal, with an edited volume drawn from the strongest cross faculty contributions.

- Documented cross faculty collaboration among Design, Fine Arts and Liberal Arts, with nominated co-conveners and track chairs.
- New institutional linkages with invited international partners and Cumulus member institutions.
- A body of student facing outcomes: poster presentations, exhibition and performance participation, awards and certification.

Who should attend ?

- Academics and research scholars in design, fine arts, humanities, AI, education, policy and wellbeing.
- Practitioners in design, the creative industries, visual arts, media and cultural heritage.

Cross faculty thematic panels

Alongside the paper tracks, two thematic panels run through both days. Each is curated jointly by the three faculties and brings an invited expert panel into conversation with delegates. Where the tracks gather research, the panels test it against practice, policy and industry.

Panel 1. Policy, Skills and the Creative Economy: Turning Curriculum into Capability

Day 1 | 22 January

Where creative education meets national policy. The panel takes the multidisciplinary mandate of NEP 2020, the entry of Indian Knowledge Systems into the curriculum, national skill standards and craft livelihoods, public educational media, and sets them against what employers actually ask of a creative graduate. Design brings the stake in skills, craft to industry pipelines and employability. Liberal Arts brings policy, governance, ethics and the knowledge systems question. Fine Arts brings arts education, cultural institutions and the livelihood of the practising artist, where recognition and funding are thinnest. The question the panel holds is a practical one: what has to change for policy intent to reach the studio, the workshop and the first job.

Panel 2. The Machine in the Studio: Authorship, Ethics and Creative Education

Day 2 | 23 January

What artificial intelligence is doing to the three things a creative faculty exists to protect: authorship, judgement and the apprenticeship that produces both. The panel moves from the making of the artefact to the teaching of the maker, and on to the question of ownership that neither law nor pedagogy has yet settled. Design asks what remains of the brief when generation is cheap. Fine Arts asks what authorship means when the hand is optional. Liberal Arts asks who carries the ethical and legal weight of the result. If the machine can make the artefact, what is it that we are still teaching, and who owns what comes out.

Alignment: national missions & global goals

DISHA 2027 does not claim alignment by declaration. Each track and each panel carries a specific obligation, and the table below records where the work of the conference meets the work of the nation.

National missions and policy frameworks

01 Viksit Bharat 2047
The organising horizon of the conference. Every track asks what a developed India should look like culturally and creatively, not only economically.

02 National Education Policy 2020
The conference is built as NEP intends education to be: three faculties, one platform, and a Creative Education track on multidisciplinary pedagogy and practice led research.

03 Indian Knowledge Systems Division, Ministry of Education
Track 4 is the signature track, treating IKS as a working resource for sustainability rather than as heritage, and addressing its translation into curriculum, policy and practice.

04 Skill India Mission and the National Skills Qualification Framework
Panel 1 places national skill standards, sector skill councils and creative employability in direct conversation with curriculum design.

05 PM Vishwakarma
Track 1 on craft to industry pipelines and Track 4 on circular livelihoods speak to the traditional artisan economy the scheme supports.

06 One District One Product and Vocal for Local
Design led market access for regional craft ecosystems, with the textile and craft belts of Gujarat as a live case.

07 Make in India and Atmanirbhar Bharat
Product and industrial design for circularity, material innovation and manufacturing facing design research.

08 Startup India
Call for Proposals sessions on design led ventures, incubation and creative entrepreneurship.

09 Digital India and Digital Public Infrastructure
Track 5 on inclusion, cultural access and the ethics of public digital systems.

10 National AVGC and XR initiatives
Track 1 on animation, VFX and immersive storytelling, and Track 5 on extended reality and interactive media.

11 Mission LiFE, Lifestyle for Environment
Sustainable consumption and production as a design and arts problem across Tracks 1, 2 and 4.

12 Ek Bharat Shreshtha Bharat
Track 3 on literature, languages and translation across Bharat, and the cultural exchange built into the conference format.

13 G20 New Delhi Leaders Declaration legacy
Cultural heritage, the creative economy and digital transformation carried forward through an international platform.

14 Anusandhan National Research Foundation
Track 6 on research capacity, publication and dissemination in the creative disciplines.
